The developers will also need to put a pathway in after the gate is installed, but the school district has not yet followed through. Discussion regarding PID Revision – Stephanie Russell, Sean Wilkinson, Steffanie Ebert, Lauren Thomas, Steve Collier, Rick Grover, Charlie Ewert, Ashley Thoman, Tucker Weight, Jessika Clark

Lauren Thomas reviewed a proposed update to the PID (Public Improvement District) policy, which includes clarification on when boundaries overlap between districts and the possibility of entering Interlocals with PIDs to reduce costs associated with PID requests. She discussed charging fees for PID services, noting that while state code allows charging fees, it's silent on administrative costs. There is also the challenge of calculating costs due to the varied nature of PID services and the difficulty in tracking employee time. Stephanie Russell will be putting a fee schedule together for staff time spent on PID-related work and will review changes to state statute that will affect the policy. She also addressed concerns about developers manipulating the current state statute and the need to tighten the policy to prevent abuse, while maintaining the ability to make exceptions when necessary. Steve Collier discussed the timing of the final local entity plat process and agrees that maintaining the final local entity plat process near the end of the petition process to avoid duplicate work. He also agreed to incorporate the final plat into the governing document section and include the maximum boundary map as a unique process element. Stephanie also addressed concerns about PID reporting requirements, noting a potential conflict between the state auditor's office and the legislature regarding PID responsibility and reporting.
